Inca

Second Emperor (Pachacuti's son) TUPA INCA YUPANQUI ("The Unforgettable One") lacked horses, yet his conquests were as far-flung as those of hard-riding Incas, such as Genghis Khan. He thrust north to Quito, Ecuador, turned south to overrun the Moon Kingdom of CHIMOR and lesser fiefdoms along 2,500 miles of Coastlines, marched last to conquer highland Bolivia, then annexed an area bigger than Spain in northern Chile and Argentina often his enemies gave up without a fight lest they suffer vengeance:

We'll drink corn beer from your skull
From your teeth we'll make a necklace.
From your bones, flutes
From your skin we'll make a drum
And then we'll dance.

(INCAAN VERSE)

1471-1493

TUPA INCA succeeded Pachacuti.
He conquered vast lands for the empire.
